

Jan. 11. 1861

Oliver Johnson,
Editor Anti-Slavery Standard,
5 Beekman Street,
New York City.

25

Boston, Jan. 10, 1852.

Dear Johnson:

In reply to yours by the bundle, I will say, that, though I have written to Dr. Percy that I will make his house my headquarters during my brief stay in New York, still, as he lives as far off from you as 172 West 28th street, and as it would take a good while to go there, take tea, &c., after the arrival of the train, I will accept your invitation, and be with you at tea at Mrs. Savin's; where our friend Theodore Tilton, who is now at my side, tells me he will meet us. But he has an impression that Mr. Bruce lives at Yonkers; in which case, I think it will not be worth while to go so far, lest I might subject Dr. Percy to inconvenience in sitting up for me that night. —

But I am in your hands, and sure of your judgment as well as of your kindly offices.

Should anything happen that I fail to be with you Monday evening,
do not be uneasy; for I do not mean to fail to be at the Cooper Institute.
Possibly, therefore, I may not leave Boston till the Monday night or Tuesday morning train; but, of course, I now fully intend to start Monday morning, and to be with you in the evening.

Filton tells me he had a large audience at Salem last evening, and gave them some very radical talk. It is very pleasant to see his cheerful face, and to enjoy his good company.

With regards to Mary Anne and Mrs. Savin and household, I remain,

Affectionately yours,

Wm. Lloyd Garrison.

